Thom Browne is widely recognized for redefining modern tailoring. Through his collections for men, women and children, Browne conveys a true American sensibility.

"The idea of uniformity to me is interesting because I think it does show true individuality, and I think that it shows true confidence."

In 2003, Browne began his business with five grey suits in a made-to-measure shop in New York City's West Village. With each jacket and trouser, he paired a grey cardigan, a white oxford shirt, a grey tie and silver tie-bar, and classic black brogues. The jacket was sharply tailored with a high-armhole fit. The trouser was hemmed at the ankle. This is the Thom Browne uniform.

The company has since expanded to include ready-to-wear, footwear, accessories, and a new fragrance. Browne is now known for his runway presentations and films, which have gained global attention for bringing viewers into his unique world. Each collection represents a new story of its own, taking traditional fabrics and reinterpreting them in a new way.

Now a global brand with over 50 stores, Thom Browne continues to challenge expectations with his approach to design, tailoring and presentation. His influence is evident through the culture-defining individuals who wear Thom Browne. The grey suit remains elemental to all he does, signifying a singular point-of-view and the commitment to exceptional quality in fabrics and tailoring.
